Notes:

Hawthorne family Playschool is a mixed-age play-based cooperative preschool fostering self-awareness, relationships with others, and connections to the natural world. Our teacher, Susan Eisman, draws from the practices of Reggio Emilia, Waldorf, Re-evaluation Counseling and peace activism. She partners with deeply invested parents to provide a nurturing learning community in which children and families thrive. Family involvement in our playschool community is highly valued. HFP members work hard as a team to provide a joyful, flourishing learning environment. Membership requires a primary caregiver to spend at least two to three days in a six-week period in the classroom as a teacher assistant. Membership requires each family to hold a job or board position and participate in monthly membership meetings. Active fundraising is another fundamental part of each family's involvement. Tuition rates are set below the actual cost of care. In effort to keep tuition affordable and to secure scholarship funds, fundraising is an integral part of the operating budget. The HFP community welcomes families who are eager to roll up their sleeves sharing their interests, passions and skills to help enrich a learning environment worthy of our children. We embrace diversity, welcoming families of any race, color, sexual orientation, ability, national or ethnic origin.

With this in mind, please comment about how your child and family would benefit from and contribute to our program. Are you interested in holding a board member position (President, Membership, Fund Raising, Class Representative, et.) or sharing special skills/talents (carpentry, music, dance, gardening, sewing, teaching, fundraising, marketing, etc.)? Is there anything else you would like us to know?

HFP strives to be a diverse and affirming community of all families, embracing mixed-race families, lesbian and gay families, divorced families, and families from a variety of cultural backgrounds.
